

Changes on the ING Bank Śląski Management Board

Sławomir Soszyński, Vice-President of ING Bank Śląski, notified the Supervisory Board of the bank that he was not going to run for re-election. He cited personal reasons for his resignation. He will hold his current function until the General Meeting of the bank approving the financial statements for 2024.

Sławomir Soszyński has worked at the bank since 2019 and he is in charge of the CIO Division and cybersecurity. During his term of office, he successfully implemented the bank's strategy in terms of fast digital development and increased digitalisation of services. In 2022, Sławomir Soszyński was honoured with the Digital Shapers award in the category "Digital Transformation". The award was granted by Digital Poland Foundation. In 2023, he also took the award for ING as "Innovation Leader according to IT companies" of the IT@Bank ranking.

Sławomir Soszyński has many years of experience as a CIO; he has worked in technology and cybersecurity in leading financial institutions, such as J.P. Morgan or Citi for 20 years. During his career to date, he completed about a dozen of complex digital transformations while developing international talent teams and operating at the management board level in the financial sector. Sławomir Soszyński also advises startups and played a role in more than 150 projects involving them.

The Supervisory Board thanked Sławomir Soszyński for his work for ING Bank Śląski and for his personal contribution to the achievements and development of the bank.

I would like to thank Sławomir for his work and for his personal contribution to the achievements and development of the bank. Together, we went through a period of fast digital development and increased digitalisation of services. The CIO division is in an excellent shape and is ready for any current and future challenges that we may face. Our bank is the undisputed and recognisable technology leader in the banking sector in Poland. To Sławomir, technology is the catalyst of changes. His innovative approach to business resulted in the implementation of cutting-edge solutions in our organisation, consistent implementation of the strategy to transition to cloud computing and architecture of the future; it also contributed to the development of technology leaders which, by extension, increases the effectiveness and quality of products and processes supporting all business lines of the bank. We wish Sławomir many successes in his professional development and satisfaction from any new challenges, said Brunon Bartkiewicz, President of Management Board of ING Bank Śląski.
